This year, "most of the berries are red and ripe, but not totally mature," said Stephen Zidek, an agricultural entomologist for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service, who has been studying the bees. "Maybe a small amount of white ones, but mostly red." The bees are the black and yellow Western honeybees, Apis mellifera, that have been working the wild strawberries from Mexico and California, said Zidek, who recently learned that the Pacific Grove-based Santa Cruz County Beekeepers Association has been keeping a close eye on bees collecting pollen from the area's wild strawberries. He was among the guests at a recent meeting of the Pacific Grove Beekeepers Association who shared their findings with a group of fellow beekeepers and members of the public. Wild strawberries, also known as deer strawberries or deer
