Mobile commerce apps and websites play a critical role in the purchase and sale of mobile phone accessories, mobile games, e-books, video download services, music downloads, movies and TV shows. Given that the Apple App Store and Google Play store represent the most visited platform for mobile apps and websites respectively, it is crucial for these businesses to quickly and easily get their apps and websites into these stores to be visible to customers and drive sales. However, it is not always as simple as creating a mobile app and uploading it to the Apple or Google store. Many mobile commerce businesses will not have a presence in these stores and must first collect downloads from other apps or mobile websites. The Mobile FIS Direct Submission system is a solution that provides businesses with a fast and efficient method to distribute their mobile app to these stores. The mobile submission system will automatically create an in-app link that allows customers to download the app on their iPhone. The in-app link will then launch the business' mobile app on the customer's device. Businesses can choose to either charge a download fee, offer a free sample of the app, offer a promo code or all three. In a few simple steps, businesses can distribute their mobile apps via the Mobile FIS Direct Submission system. This system has been adopted by several of the top global mobile markets: This book brings up-to-date information for a mobile
