Q: How to do a "simple" infinite loop in Firebase Database rules I'm currently trying to figure out how to do this. If I have the following code and I give it a reference to a database, the code should just read in all the data and append it to a list. However, there is no data to read in and the app does not crash. To my understanding the rules should be kind of a "in-between" of read and write. So in this case there is "no-write" happening, so when I read the rules I should get a list with every item in the database. With that understanding, I went on to write the following rules: { "rules": { "android": { "objects": { "$object_id": { ".read": true, ".write": true, ".$push": false, ".$pop": false, ".$pull": false, ".$set": false, ".$addToSet": false, ".$delete": false } } } } } And that should be all I need, except I get no data in my console and nothing happens. Is it possible to run an infinite read (or at least a read until there's no more data)? How should I do it?
