It is known to be great for simple images editing. However it is somewhat more difficult to use for advanced photo editing such as post-processing with noise reduction and advanced filters. The main interface is laid out in a vertical fashion. It has a left column for navigation, a grid of thumbnails along the top, a side panel for the stack of image in the middle and a top panel for tools such as exposure and image previews. On top of all these, you'll find a small toolbar for basic editing tools like levels, curves, gradients and highlight tools as well as a few other options along the bottom. The left hand side also has a setting area that enables you to view, copy, paste, etc. of images from your computer. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a thermal transfer sheet, and an image forming method and an image forming apparatus for forming an image on an image receiving sheet with the use of the thermal transfer sheet. 2. Discussion of the Background In recent years, printers which have become standard equipment in office environment are required to have an image forming speed and an image quality equivalent to those of a silver salt film for printing. Among these printers, a laser printer has a relatively simple configuration and can be small in size, so that it has been rapidly developing in recent years. However, an image forming method employed in such laser printers employs a solid laser or a semiconductor laser of red to infrared regions. As a result, non-color toners are used in such lasers. It is considered that this is because a toner having a molecular weight in the range of between several thousands and several tens of thousands shows a sufficient fixation. However, with the recent development of color laser printers, an image forming method employed in such color laser printers is shifting from the above-mentioned toners to toners having a lower molecular weight. An image formed on a transfer sheet by the image forming method employing such low-molecular-weight toners can be delaminated and transferred onto a transfer sheet by a subsequent peeling operation. Therefore, even with a solid laser or a semiconductor laser of red to infrared regions, an image formed on the transfer sheet using a low-molecular-weight toner cannot be fixed. The reason for this is that such a low-molecular-weight toner does not show a sufficient fixation. As a method for solving the above problem, toners formed by aggregating toner particles in a binder resin are proposed. Description of the Background Art In the context of the present invention, the terms xe2x80x9cwindow blind assemblyxe2x80x9d are not limited to those types of assemblies having a mechanism for raising and lowering the slats of a roller blind. These types of window blind assemblies are well known in the art and are generally used for aesthetic reasons. The present invention incorporates a stationary rail and a movable rail which are configured for attachment to existing architectural opening panels, such as doors and windows, a track rail that includes a channel through which a channel roller of a roller blind will pass, and a conduit that will accept a roller blind. The stationary rail is fixed to an architectural opening panel and a movable rail is slidably attached to the stationary rail. The movable rail is attached to the movable rail at a point closest to a bottom of the movable rail. The principal objects and advantages of the invention will be apparent to those skilled in the art upon examining the accompanying drawings and upon reading the following description of the invention.Q: what does.* in bash mean I am currently reading bash's source code, I found some code like: for dir in $base_dirs.; do ^ I have no idea what. means here.
