Adobe LiveCycle Designer ES v8.2.1.3144 (.exe,Portable) A: You can use Awk command to parse and print the lines in the file as below:
awk 'NR==1{print substr($0,60,60)}' test.txt awk prints the output when the line matches the condition NR==1, where NR is the line number in the record that is referred to as the current record in awk. Once we know where the line is, we can use an index to read the data from the index to the end of the line. Explanation: This prints the first 60 characters (60th character is space) for the first line in the input file. NR==1{print substr($0,60,60)} print - this command prints the output on the standard output. substr - the syntax is substr(string, start, length) start - start of substring. length - the length of the substring. You can read more about Substr from the link. To print more than 60 characters for the first line, change it as below:
NR==1{print substr($0,61,61)} NR==1{print substr($0,62,62)}
NR==1{print substr($0,63,63)} NR==1{print substr($0,64,64)}
NR==1{print substr($0,65,65)} NR==1{print substr($0,66,66)}

NR==1{print substr($0,69,69)} NR==1{print substr($0,70,70)}
