Image: ANSYS AppCenter.Q: Using Swift 1.2 in Xcode 6.4 for iOS development I have upgraded to Xcode 6.4. In the previous version it was showing the error Tentative breakpoint 1 has been treated, but does not match the target When I read the release note it says that this is due to Swift 1.2. My question is, is the 'disable All' breakpoint due to Xcode 6.4/Swift 1.2? If not, could you suggest me, is there any workaround to get rid of this? A:

It's a bug in Xcode 6.4. Please file a radar (bug report) with the following information: an exact reproduction of the problem, using the original project, with a project file made with the "iOS 8" template, a project with the "swift 1.2" (or some other version of) the template, also see related GitHub issue. An apology to anyone who might think that I have been unfaithful to the blog in the last year. It's not that I haven't had anything to write, I have had some amazing things happen (my first baby has come, my first boy, and I am ever more in love with him, and his Mum). I have been able to write, and I have had some wonderful feedback on that work (amazingly). The blog changed last year when my husband and I split up. I was, and still am, grateful to have been able to express that feeling of loss and pain and to write the story of the good and the bad and everything in-between, and I can always go back and read those posts, but they aren't the same as sharing the experience with someone who will genuinely listen. I am still a writer. In my blog I am a writer, in my fiction I am a writer, and in my published work I am a writer. I have come to the exciting and scary decision

My source table has a column named TimeStamp which is a datatype Varchar(3) not really a timestamp. Then i have a result table which has an order by column named TimeStamp How can i make it to sort the result by the column time in ascending order? This is my code: string Query="SELECT TimeStamp FROM Import WHERE Attribute = " + listBox1.SelectedItem.ToString() + " ORDER BY TimeStamp"; What i have right now it's just the default order i want is in the order of the column

TimeStamp. A: try to add "ORDER BY " + OrderByCriteria SSIS Script task's Result sets are just metadata so even if you get the metadata its not guaranteed that the resulting rows will be ordered by any orderbys that you have specified. And the columns OrderBy for Result sets is explained in more detail here: Best Practices for SSIS Scripting: Y_U\(G_{n,1}\)\$ and \$Y_U\(G_{n,2
