Hello! Last year, WiX Toolset 9.0 was released and it was a big deal - with lots of new features. This was made possible by the introduction of our Model Driven Development (MDD) project; it was the first - and currently only - instance of this approach in the WiX toolset. While there was a real lack of documentation and tooling at the time around the release of this tool, we have a guide that will help you get started with using the WiX Toolset with MDD today. In this post, we are going to cover: How to build a model using the WiX toolset. How to create a custom action using the WiX toolset. How to install a WiX-based MSI using the Windows Installer API. How to control a WiX-based MSI using the Windows Installer API. How to build a model using the WiX toolset. The latest release of WiX Toolset 9.0 adds a lot of new tools and improvements, from the design perspective, in addition to those introduced in WiX Toolset 8.0. To get an idea of what has changed, check out the "What's New in WiX Toolset 9.0" blog post, which includes a list of brand new tools, components and project templates. Meanwhile, if you want to get a detailed overview of the changes, you can check out the roadmap. What's new? WiX Toolset 8.0 added simple templates for building simple installers based on the WiX Toolset and Visual Studio 2008. Along with its associated product, it also introduced the Candle Toolset project, based on the open-source Subversion tag-based source code version control system. WiX Toolset 9.0 brings significant improvements to the Candle Toolset, including a more powerful UI, cleanly integrating into Visual Studio 2010, and making the tool more accessible and easy to use for a broader group of users. In addition, it adds a number of new features to the WiX Toolset proper, including a new MDD (Model Driven Development) project which uses the MDD model-driven-programming model to aid in developing WiX Toolset-based projects, as well as code generation for developers targeting the WiX Toolset; an updated Visual Studio project template for WiX Toolset, a tabbed control-based graphical UI for WiX Toolset, and components and templates to abstract common WiX source code elements

ABOUT THE PRODUCT(S) Originating in Japan, the aircraft industry of the island nation's finest early twentieth-century producers such as Fuji, Nakajima, Kawanishi, and Mitsubishi began to be replaced by a variety of military trainers, utility, and night fighters produced by the end of World War II. Production shifted from home-scale manufacturing to tooling and production by assembly-line techniques on the wide-bodied U.S. Air Force C-82 aircraft that powered Japan's World War II allies. Pressed for military procurement to further utilize the C-82, the Japanese Home Defense Force, also known as the Imperial Defense Force, turned to North American Aviation, Inc. to assist in the organization's need for 72 C-119 airborne administrative units. "The first mission for the C-119 was to replace large numbers of unorganized B-29s and B-30s in Japan after the bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki and the nuclear attacks at Tokai. All aircraft were manned by Japanese and deployed to bases in Japan and Formosa. Reportedly 3a67dffeec

A: Let $L_1:y-x+2=0$ and $L_2:y-x-1=0$. If you have two points, say $P_1=(x_1,y_1)$ and $P_2=(x_2,y_2)$, lying on the two lines, then you are looking for a linear equation $y-x+c=0$, which has a solution $x=y+c$. The equation is the same for both lines, and so, if you have $P_1=(x_1,y_1)$ and $P_2=(x_2,y_2)$ on both L_1 and L_2, then $(y_1-x_1+c_1)+(y_2-x_2+c_2)=0$. Now add y_2-y_1, and you have x_2-x_1.
