It is 0 degrees out, -2 to be exact. We have been having bone chilling winds. I think there is zero chance we will get to the trailhead before dark. In the 2-hour drive to Grizzly, from Castle Pass, it is a perfect day. I decide to rent a pickup and while I am in the comfort of my truck, I stop a local farm couple named Paul and Sandy to give me a little "face time." The driveway to Sandy and Paul's home was clear of snow, but the driveway to their house was not. The first thing Sandy tells me is that three meters of snow blew into their neighbor's yard and wreaked havoc on his porch. Sandy apologizes, but says, "It is 6:15 and that is all we have had to deal with this winter." I chime in with her, "Isn't that bad? You could have been dealing with that for two months." "No," she says, "there have been almost no storms this winter. We are supposed to have snow sometime this weekend, but there is no way. We have been sick with weather. Only one storm hit us." I am struck by the fact that Sandy and her husband live in a trailer, not a manufactured home. They are incredibly unselfish. The community is watching and waiting. They are planning on shoveling later. Paul tells me their generator broke so they were not able to heat their home. They have the wind chill factor to deal with. They have been e79caf774b

The conduct on the part of the FBI agents is rather suspect. It is acknowledged by counsel for the government that it is not the custom of the FBI to make presentence recommendations of this kind. Nevertheless, the sentencing judge accorded the defendant a two-level reduction and the prosecutor, presumably acting on the advice of the Attorney General, simply accepted the court's finding. 12 We find it difficult to see what was gained by the conduct of the Assistant United States Attorney. On this record there is no justification for the prosecutor's recommendation. However, if the government is to retain the power to oppose sentences below the minimum mandatory penalty then such recommendations have to be legitimate. We conclude that in the context of this case the recommendation, even if induced by improper conduct on the part of the FBI, does not justify the district judge imposing a sentence at the low end of the guideline range. Furthermore, we have already determined that the conduct of the FBI agents was improper. We cannot conclude that this combination of facts and inferences leads to the conclusion that the sentence imposed was justified by the facts of this case. The sentence is therefore vacated. 13 The sentence shall be vacated and the matter remanded to the district court. 1 At the time of sentencing Gallo was a lawful permanent resident of the United States. The guidelines apply equally to deportable aliens. See 8 U.S.C. Sec. 1101(a)(43) (1982) 2 The minimum mandatory sentence for violation of Sec. 841(a) is five years. See 21 U.S.C. Sec. 841(b)(1)(B) (1982) Here is a collection of brilliant speeches that have made some mark in history, and which have changed the course of events. The focus of these speeches is on the key political, social, economic and religious issues, and the evaluation of them is to help the decision-makers in every walk of life to better equip them in making decisions. One can classify them into four categories: The first category includes the collection of brilliant speeches that are
