Primary support for the subproject and the subproject's principal investigator may have been provided by other sources, including other NIH sources. The Total Cost listed for the subproject likely represents the estimated amount of Center infrastructure utilized by the subproject, not direct funding provided by the NCRR grant to the subproject or subproject staff. The structural biology of the chemokine-receptor system offers numerous opportunities for gaining insights into a number of important questions in the immune system. The goal of this proposal is to understand the details of receptor-ligand interactions that govern heterodimerization and the resultant biological effects. Our previous studies clearly demonstrated the importance of the beta-sheet interactions at the dimer interface for the chemokine-receptor interactions. We will focus on the specificity of the receptor dimerization, elucidating the structural determinants for receptor dimerization at the interface. This will be achieved by means of complementary approaches. First, to determine the binding conformation of the beta-sheet interactions in the chemokine-receptor complexes, we will carry out NMR studies to characterize the interactions between isolated receptor-EC domains, and between isolated ligand-EC-N domains. In the second approach, we will examine and validate the binding of the receptor-ligand complexes using protein-protein docking techniques, and also investigate the role of the beta-sheet interactions in receptor dimerization. Because of the importance of

I'm currently in the early stages of deploying a web application built on top of Glassfish 4.1 and using annotated EJBs.

Everything seems to be working fine, but I noticed that when I deploy the application, I can make a call to the database using the EJB's methods, but when I test the program using JUnit, an exception is thrown: java.sql.SQLException: No suitable driver found for jdbc:derby:C:\Users\...\localDB. My question is why is this happening? Is it something that could be causing the test to fail? I have tried redeploying the application and restarting the server, but I'm still getting the same exception
