Day 2: Pella After spending the night in Pella, Carol and I decided to head back to the border over night so we could begin our journey to Antara. It was about a 10 mile trip to Ixobrich and upon arrival, we were greeted by a much-needed shower. We made the decision to sleep in Ixobrich rather than Antara in order to save money. The next morning, we headed out to Antara to check in. There was a long line and people were already pushing their luggage out the door by the time we got there. We talked to a few people on the way and found out that the airport had closed a couple days earlier due to inclement weather. We were informed that the airport would be closed for another week. We found a place to stay, booked a shuttle to the train station, and met the train to Budapest. It was
