ScreenShader is a Chrome extension designed to protect your eyes when using your computer at night. Just like his counterparts, it'll automatically adjust the screen colour temperature to match the time of day, which helps to reduce eye strain. There's a lot of different Night Mode extensions out there (some of which cost money) and most of them just work on websites. ScreenShader on the other hand works with all websites, and it ensures that your time on your computer as well as your experience on websites is comfortable. Customization ScreenShader has a ton of customization options as well. Not only can you alter the settings for your screen colour temperature and whether or not you want ScreenShader to turn it off when you click on a link (such as selecting Night Mode settings), but you can also change the settings for your background image (or choose a different one) and switch between your favourite eye colors. There are many different customization options available in ScreenShader. Use the Favourites Menu to choose how to set it up. Features - Works with all websites. - Turn off Chrome's screen when you click on a link. - Offers the option to turn off the screen over Night Mode. - Use custom profiles for individual sites. - Add a new colour, change your background image and change your favourite eye colours. - Turn ScreenShader OFF for a site. - Automatically changes screen colour temperature over time. - Lots of configuration options. - Detailed documentation. - User Guide. - Free to use. Deep Sleep Browser is a minimalist browser that helps you to save as much energy as possible by using a very low and highly efficient color scheme. One of the things that stand out about Deep Sleep Browser is how it uses very few colors, giving everything a transparent appearance. It not only helps your eyes to stay comfortable, it also allows the user to save a

- User Manual - Privacy PolicyQ: XPath of the link element I need to get XPath of the link element that has the text "error". How should i go with the path to get the desired value? field_title;?> field_title;?> A: Here is an example: //label[contains(.,'error')]/ancestor::div[1]/a[1] I am not familiar with the HTML, but this is equivalent to: //label[contains(.,'error')]/ancestor::div[1]/descendant::a[1] The second version is usually a bit faster as there is less navigation performed. EDIT: To return the text value you can use this: //label[contains(.,'error')]/ancestor::div[1]/a[1]/text() Co-fractionation and mass spectrometric identification of histones and their variants across a cell cycle and during erythroid maturation. Histones are highly conserved proteins that are ubiquitously expressed and abundant in eukaryotic cells. While a general decrease in histone abundance and dramatic replacement of histones with histone variants have been documented during both interphase and mitosis in many cell types, the distribution of specific histones in cycling cells has received little previous attention. In this study, we employed two-dimensional gel electrophoresis to detect and separate the histones from different mouse tissues and cell types. The distribution of the histones revealed considerable compartmentalization of the different types of histones, with major fractions of some cell types, such as mouse embryonic fibroblasts, containing little or no histone H1. Also, while most of the core histones were present throughout the cell cycle, the b7e8fdf5c8
