He recently did a special for Comedy Central, and he was able to kill it. In a show called "The New Cheech and Chong," he was just making fun of celebrity drug use, and how they are more famous for their drug use than for anything else. He had a few comedians who weren't too big yet though. He had some big names like Jay Mohr, Jamie Kennedy, and Craig Shoemaker. The comedian really did a good job. He had a really good time doing the show, and it was very funny. He even made one guy who read it so mad that he flipped the piece of paper he was holding upside down. It was so funny. City officials are investigating the death of a child that occurred at a Northeast Portland preschool. According to city spokesperson Rachel Kretzschmar, a child was found unresponsive at Avalon School on NE Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard on the afternoon of June 5. CPR was performed on the child before the child was transported to a hospital. The death was ruled a homicide by police and the Bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation, Kretzschmar said. Kretzschmar said the student's family has declined to comment at this time. Police officers responded to the school shortly after 1 p.m. Avalon School is a small, privately-run, preschool that serves about 170 students in grades K through 2 and preschoolers in grades K-1. In 2018, the Portland, Oregon, school ranked No. 34 in the Portland Business Journal.

We are always looking for new ideas and suggestions. Today's interview is the second part of the series of "Ten Questions from Ten Indie Game Developers". The first interview featured Ville Laihiala (Fusion Software).Today's interview is with Tim Lambert (Sniper: Gatling). - I have read about Fusion Software, you seem to be a great example of a small indie team that works with a lot of passion. What's the development history of your company and its partners? Fusion Software was started in 2002 by Ville Laihiala (16) and Renée Jacobsen (15) who had been working together at www.arcadefluences.com for almost a year. At first we were just a small, passionate team of two working from Renée's and Ville's homes. Then in 2005 the website was acquired by E-Play ( and we were able to get the funds to expand. Now we have 6 people working for Fusion Software. - Where are you located and what's your office like? We are located in downtown Helsinki, Finland. We have an office in downtown, and another one at an artists studio in the suburbs. In the end they are connected by a network of passageways underneath the city. - I saw that you have worked for Electronic Arts, was this a direct job
