Russia is the key player in the ongoing conflict between Washington and the Syrian government, US officials and experts say. It is important that the United States and its allies acknowledge their reliance on Russia as a partner in the Syrian conflict, according to a senior US government official, diplomats and analysts. The official also told Al Jazeera that it was crucial that Russia's key role in Syria be acknowledged, for example, by the promotion of non-violent opposition groups to key positions in the Syrian opposition, so that the United States no longer has to depend on Moscow to provide support. "Russia and Iran are the key elements in the direction of the war," the official said, referring to the Syrian government and its allies, Russia and Iran. "We know that the Russians have purchased large amounts of weaponry for Syria; that's not [to be] lost on the Iranians and the Syrians. They see Syria as basically a proxy war with the United States." Iran plays a key role in the conflict All of these issues are inextricably linked to the failure of the US policy and its proxy forces to destroy the Syrian government. In the absence of a non-violent Syrian opposition, the "US effort there has been a complete failure," according to the US official. The official explained that while US interests have been able to win some victories - such as the removal of the regime of the Syrian President Bashar al-Assad - they have not been able to achieve their ultimate objectives. "Obviously, the removal of Assad is in the interests of the United States - it's not exactly in the interests of Russia, which sees it as an Iranian proxy. And therefore, any consequences of the conflict that affect Iran or the Assad government [will be viewed as a success] for the United States." The value of Russia's involvement in the Syrian conflict and the alignment it creates with the regime of Syrian President Bashar al-Assad is that it helps to maintain a very effective proxy against the US and its allies, the official said. The choice of the Syrian government as the political adversary is a tactical move on the part of Moscow, the official said, but he pointed out that, in Moscow's view, the Syrian people as a whole would benefit from a regime that rules in the interests of the whole of the population. "I think a regime that is viewed as favoring the elite... [but] the ordinary citizen is really suffering from the conflict would be unsustainable over the
