How to beat a Berserker?The production of natural gas and petroleum by the decomposition of methane and other hydrocarbons and by the gasification and liquefaction of solid fuels and other organic substances is now widely practiced. Such processes are, as a rule, thermochemical processes where combustion or pyrolysis is the actual reaction which produces energy, in the form of heat. Sometimes hydrogen is also formed and when this hydrogen is used in a fuel cell it generates electricity which is free of the undesirable air pollution and greenhouse gas emissions associated with combustion. The pyrolysis or decomposition of methane is used in many large scale plants producing natural gas. However, the production of methane from carbonaceous materials, such as coal, is still in the experimental stage. Methane may be produced by the pyrolysis of solid organic material at temperatures of 200 to 450.degree. C. and pressures of 0.5 to 6 MPa. It is possible to decompose natural gas, which generally contains about 70 to 80 mole percent of methane, into liquid hydrocarbons by this process. Increasingly, methane is produced as a by-product in coal gasification plants. This methane

I have a TableView with a custom Skin: `table.setSkin(new MySkin());` I have implemented the RowSelectionModel. I can implement my own selection style (i.e. checkbox selected only if all rows are selected, or checkbox selected if the row is selected). However, I can't find how to determine if all the rows have been selected, or just a single row. When the user hits Enter in a cell, it triggers a cell edit. If they edit another cell, it also triggers a cell edit. I'd like for the checkbox to be checked if all rows are selected, and unchecked if only the row they are editing is selected. But, I can't find a way of distinguishing when this is happening. A: If you want to have the checkbox only be checked if there are no other rows selected (when the user is editing another row) then you can use the following code for the TableCell or the TableViewCell: @Override protected void updateItem(Object item, boolean empty) { super.updateItem(item, empty); if (empty || item == null) { setGraphic(null); setText(null);
